In 2019, Oliver Chua was the youngest of six speakers at the Singapore Climate Change Rally at Hong Lim Park. The articulate 11-year-old stressed the need to tackle the impact of climate change as he spoke convincingly. (16)

Oliver's interest in the environment was aroused when he attended the Mother Earth Toastmasters Club, where members can speak on such issues. Since then, he became a champion for environmental protection and gave impromptu speeches of his own. (17)

Influenced by Oliver's passion for the environment, his family not only buys at thrift shops, but also reduces food wastage by being intentional in finishing all their food. (18)

When interviewed, Oliver proudly showed his tattered Goblet of Fire book and spoke of how he opts for second-hand books and toys. (19)

"We as children have to do our part for Mother Earth," Oliver said. (20)

The Venue

Aura Dam is a massive wall built across Aura River to stop the water from flowing. It was designed to double up as a venue for events. The plan also included the creation of Aura Lake. Although the man-made lake is only one of our country's many reservoirs, its location in the heart of the city sets it apart. The beautiful City Centre Park surrounding it not only serves to collect and channel rainwater to it, but also provides ample space for recreational activities.

On the day of the event, take a tour of Aura Dam! View the informative static displays showing how it was constructed and how it prevents flooding in the city's low-lying areas. Our game stalls and food and drink stalls will be set up in the roof garden where you can enjoy spectacular views of the city.

For each question from 21 to 28, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4) and shade your answer on the Optical Answer Sheet.

"Go home and ask your mummy about your blind brother! I am surprised you didn't know that he is as blind as a bat! The neighbourhood gossip, Aunty May, told everyone in the neighbourhood about him!" bellowed Nathan, the school bully.

I wanted to throw him a punch for making fun of my two-year-old brother, David, but I was more desperate to find out the truth. With a blurry vision, I ran home as fast as I could with my heavy school bag on my scrawny shoulders. 5

I kicked my white shoes off my feet and ran to the kitchen where Mother was feeding David. Still panting, I questioned, "Is David blind?" Mother ignored my question. "Is he blind? Answer me please! I need to know the truth!"

Mother turned to me with tears in her eyes. "Yes, he's blind. He has a condition called Leber's Congenital Amaurosis and it is an inherited condition," she explained as she reached out and held my tender hands. 10

At that moment, my heart was shattered. The dream of showing David my cool soccer moves or playing video games with him was cruelly smashed by this fact. "Why did you keep the truth from me? I often wondered why he didn't look at me or why he was always tripping over things and I thought it was because he was still too young..." Before I could continue any further, Mother hugged me and cried, "I'm sorry, Caleb. Dad and I just didn't know how to tell you. You would be heartbroken if you knew the truth since we know how much you love your brother." 15

Suddenly, realisation struck me and I halted the conversation. David was blind but he could still hear the whole conversation. Not wanting him to be affected by it, I went forward and embraced him. "I love you so much, David." 20

As David grew up, he was resilient. Despite the challenges that he faced, he continued to attend the school for visually impaired children. He insisted he would take the bus home on his own. Often, he would walk through the main door looking sheepish and saying the same phrase, "Sorry Mum, I am late. I boarded the wrong bus again." 25

One day, David burst through the main door excitedly. The school had discovered that David had an extraordinary talent. Despite not being able to see, he could replicate a piece of music after listening to it being played once on the piano. Because of that, the school would like him to play solo at the inaugural musical concert. The whole family was extremely thrilled for him.

On the night of the musical concert, the emcee announced, "Now, let us put our hands together and welcome David Lim, a child prodigy in music." With vigour, David entered the stage with the widest smile on his face. Tapping the ground with his white cane, he gravitated towards the grand piano located in the middle of the stage. I sat up with anticipation and my heart was filled with pride when David took a seat on the bench. His fingers flew on the ivory and ebony keys as his music filled the air of the 500-seat concert hall. After he played his last note, the whole hall erupted into applause. David stood up and took a bow, smiling broadly as the spotlight shone brightly on him. 30 35

David would always be an inspiration to me. Through him, I learnt that having an indomitable spirit overcomes all challenges. David truly has that.

Gelato, an Italian version of ice cream, is always a favourite, especially during summer. Many (29) craving that nice cup of cold ice cream to battle the hot sun. Whether you like Italian gelato (30) the more common American ice cream, it is a comforting treat for that time (31) the year. Gelato is different from the common ice cream (32) of its very light texture. It is made with milk rather than cream.

Gelato has a variety of flavours and (33) are served in different unique plastic containers. (34) you like eating gelato, you might be curious to know where it came from. It appears that the original gelato did not come from Italy but rather, somewhere else.

You might be surprised that the first gelato (35) ingredients such as rice, spices, some snow and milk. (36) to some people, the true origin of frozen and iced desserts is China. A long time ago, Chinese people would freeze overcooked rice, certain spices and milk in snow (37) resulted in a variety of historical gelato. Later on, other versions of frozen desserts made from fruit juices and milk were popular among the Chinese community, even before the arrival of Marco Polo. By that time, people could easily buy frozen delicacies. They (38) found in the streets of Beijing which was called Khanbaliq during that time.

Regardless of the debate where the first gelato was really made, a lot of people now enjoy the ice-cold treat everywhere around the world!
