About the Game

Welcome to Hearty Hood! Everyone living in this friendly neighbourhood is glowing with health! Leading active lifestyles makes them happy! Play this game with family and friends and get a little taste of just what it is like to enjoy doing exercises together! 'Hearty Hood' provides the perfect motivation for getting your hearts pumping!

Special Promotion

Get 'Hearty Hood' from our online shop and receive free delivery! We are holding a special event on 14 November 2021 at Smiles Children's Store where 'Hearty Hood' will be sold at half price!

In the month of November, receive an e-coupon when you purchase 'Hearty Hood'. This e-coupon will give you $10 off other board games when you purchase from our online shop.

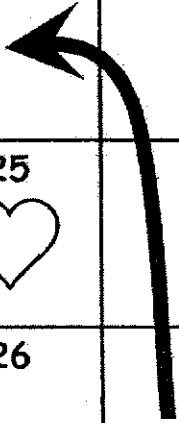

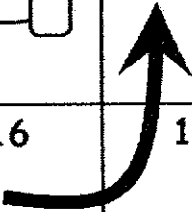

Before you play, you might want to visit the Fitness Guru website at www.fitnessguru.com and watch the free video clips.

The clips will show you the proper ways to do all kinds of exercises. Some of them will help you advance in the game. Make use of the rest to build up your fitness!

How to play:

- ★ Each player chooses a 'Hearty Hood' character and places it at "START" on the game board.
- ★ Take turns to draw an Exercise Card and carry out the instructions given. You can only move your character forward by the number of spaces indicated on the card if you successfully perform the exercise thrice.
- ★ If your character lands on a space with a heart , move your character forward by two spaces.
- ★ If your character lands on a space with a dumbbell , challenge the player after you to an arm wrestle. Winning will move your character forward by four spaces. Losing will set you back by four spaces.
- ★ There are two shortcuts to Mount Hearty. If your character lands at the end of an arrow , you can move it to the start of the arrow.
- ★ The game ends when a player reaches Mount Hearty or all the Exercise Cards have been drawn, whichever happens first. If no players reach Mount Hearty, the player who has moved the most spaces wins.

"Yes... finally, I can have a well-deserved break before my 'O' Level examination results are released," Nate sighed contentedly as he sat at the edge of his bed, stretching his tired arms. He had finished his last paper the previous day after two weeks of undertaking the most important examination of his secondary school life. The preparations had begun months prior to that. Nate certainly did not miss the days and nights he had spent poring over his notes and books, conscientiously revising for the subjects that he was going to sit for. The experience had been one of the most gruelling he had ever been through. He was just glad he could forget about studying for a while now that the examination was over. Smiling, Nate got up to go to the kitchen. However, a voice stopped him dead in his tracks.

"I don't know how we are going to cope. Now that I've been dismissed from my job, how are we going to settle our bills, household expenses and Nate's schooling needs? I'm sure the expenses are going to be higher, especially when he goes on to tertiary education next year," Mr Tan, Nate's father, lamented. When Nate took a peek outside, he saw Mrs Tan, his mother, beside his father in the living room. With her brows furrowed and forehead lined with creases of worry, she sat grimly. Tension filled the air.

15

Nate slipped back into his room quietly. His mind was whirling with thoughts. He recalled that the nearby fast food restaurant was looking for new staff when he walked past it a few days ago. After hearing what his father had said, he soon made up his mind to interview for a job at the fast food restaurant. He could spend his long break working part-time. Other than helping out his parents with the expenses, he could also earn some pocket money for himself. That would surely make working part-time more meaningful for him.

20

"Mum, Dad, I'm going to interview for a job at the nearby fast food restaurant. I'm going to spend my long break working part-time. I hope that is fine with you," Nate announced resolutely as he stood in front of his parents in the living room. His father stared at him, wide-eyed. His mother, on the other hand, had a smile on her lips, as if she understood her son's intention. She gave him an encouraging nod. Nate swiftly left the house. He was a boy on a mission and nobody could stop him.

25

After filling out a form, Nate was interviewed by the manager on duty. The interview barely took ten minutes. Since the restaurant was severely short-handed, she asked Nate whether he could start work immediately. Nate was more than happy to oblige. After a quick call home, he changed into his new uniform. The manager then showed him the way around the kitchen, including how to prepare the items on the menu. She also taught him how to handle online orders. Nate paid close attention. As dine-in was not allowed, he did not have to worry about clearing tables. He only needed to clean the restaurant if the regular cleaner was unwell. Being a fast learner, Nate instantly took to his new job. It could get busy, especially with the high volume of online orders, but with helpful and supportive colleagues, Nate was always able to get through his day.

30

35

40

"Here you go, Dad. My first pay after a month. I hope this helps in some way," Nate beamed proudly. He had resolved to continue working even after he started school, until his father's situation improved. Nothing could beat the gratitude he saw in his father's eyes. His mother looked on, tears brimming. Her son had grown up.
