Instructions to Pupils

- 1. Do not turn over this page until you are told to do so.
- 2. Answer all questions.

Part 1: Situational Writing (15 marks)

1 The pictures below show a conversation between the head prefect, John, and his fellow prefect, Priya, about their plans to visit Joy Nursing Home. Study the pictures carefully.

Your Task

Imagine you are John Tan.

Write an email to your Discipline Mistress, Miss Ng, to get her approval on what the prefects have planned for their visit to Joy Nursing Home.

You are to refer to the pictures and information on page 2 for your email.

In your email, include the following key information:

- · the place the prefects will be visiting
- the date of the visit
- the gifts for the residents
- · two activities that you are planning to carry out there
- · the reason for choosing these two activities

You may re-order the points. You should write in complete sentences.

Part 2: Continuous Writing (40 marks)

Write a composition of at least 150 words about a precious gift.

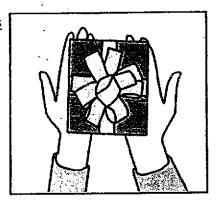

The pictures are provided to help you think about this topic.

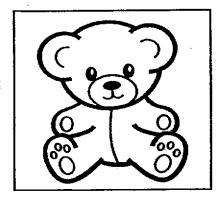

Your composition should be based on one or more of these pictures.

Consider the following points when you plan your composition:

- · What was the precious gift?
- Why was the gift precious?

You may use the points in any order and include other relevant points as well.

The dolphins we see performing at shows may look like they are smiling and having fun.

"But they are not," states Singapore's animal rights group ACRES. "Their mouths are just shaped in a way that we humans misinterpret as smiles. Visitors to marine aquariums often fail to see that the dolphins there had to have been ripped from their natural ocean environments, snatched away from their family and pod mates, held in nets, carried in trucks, hoisted into planes and flown for hours. Animal Rights Activists think that these dolphins are often traumatised, feel sad and bored when confined in small tanks. They can get stressed when they have to constantly interact with human beings. Eventually, they will become weak and ill.

(16)

(17)

(19)

OUTDOOR CLASSROOM DAY

Date: 30 October 2021, Saturday

Time: 9.00a.m to 6.00p.m

Venue: Open field next to Stamford Community Club

How this event started

Outdoor Classroom Day is an annual event organised by Stamford Community Club. This event aims to instill a love for nature and lifelong learning. The event first began in 2016. Initially, it only involved a group of stay-home parents and the Stamford Residents' Committee.

In the beginning, organisers only held nature walks and craft activities for kindergarten students in the estate. The event is now into its fifth year and has extended its reach to the pre-schools, primary schools and all the residents in Stamford Estate.

Ticket Prices for the Event

Adult: $10

Child (ages 4 - 6): $5

Child: (ages 7-12): $8

*Tickets on sale from 10 October to 28 October

"When I was young, my parents hardly took me anywhere. They expected me to stay home either to complete my homework or read. Though I found these activities useful, I thought learning beyond books was equally important. One of my favourite pastimes then was to play 'catching' at the void deck with my neighbours. My parents thought it was a waste of time but I found 'catching' to be fun and quite educational.

When I became a parent, I realised the importance of learning through play and exploration. My two children have an overwhelming source of energy and curiosity for the world around them. They are not afraid to learn by exploring nature. Recently, our family went cycling around Pulau Ubin. I hope that with a day dedicated for outdoor learning, everyone will be more aware of what the environment can teach us."

SOME BENEFITS OF OUTDOOR EDUCATION

Greater self-awareness

Children who play outdoors are more likely to develop stronger reasoning and observation skills. They get to explore the world from a different perspective and learn how to be aware of the space they are in. Through outdoor activities, children will understand the concept of 'cause and effect' better.

Appreciation for the environment

In one study, 87% of individuals who spent time outside as a child carried a love of nature into their adult years. 84% said they still considered the environment an important priority. By spending time outside, children learn to appreciate the environment because they have first-hand knowledge of plants and animals.

Improved peer-to-peer relationships

Children who play outside are more aware of their feelings and feelings of other too. Studies have shown that children who play outdoors are less likely to bully others. Outdoor play often requires imagination and teamwork. These help children to have positive interactions with each other.

Section I: Comprehension (Open-ended) 20 marks

Read this passage carefully and answer the questions 71 to 80.

My childhood memories were mostly set in the kitchen. My family and I would be sitting around the table eating Mother's homemade chicken pasta on Tuesday nights. Mother would bake decadent birthday cupcakes for me to take to school. All the women in my extended family buzzing around Grandma's kitchen, whipping up no less than twelve dishes. What was even more amazing then was despite the short time they took, each dish was extremely delicious.

While other kids went to the McDonald's drive-thru after sports practice, Mother had home-cooked fried noodles waiting for me after tuition lessons. Mealtime had brought us together as a family and it was something to be savoured as it built bonds. For Mother, cooking was her language of love. It was then that I learned that cooking for someone is a way to express love.

However, once I hit my teenage years, I was old enough to become daunted by Mother's culinary prowess. I would watch her expertly de-bone a fish and asked, "How will I ever learn how to cook? It looks like a lot of work."

Mother would laugh and say, "You love to eat good food, so one day you are going to figure it out. Cooking can actually be kind of fun."

In my early 20s, I was single and living on my own in a small apartment. However, after looking at the plain selection of food around my area, going out for dinner did not interest me. I yearned for Mother's specialty and realised this was the "one day" she was talking about. Hence armed with her recipe, I taught myself how to cook in my kitchen and I was impressed by my first "chilli crab". Mother was right — preparing a meal was fun. I got to experiment with spices and the presentation of my dishes was much like making edible crafts. I basked in the joy of being able to express myself through cooking. My ritual after every night of work was preparing dinner for myself.

As I ate the fruits of my labour at my table, part of me still felt empty as there was no one to share my food with. I wanted to share my love for cooking and my food with others. Rather than eating alone, I started inviting friends over for meals on weekends in my tiny apartment. I relished their smiles when they saw the food that I presented to them. The deep bonds we shared in our conversations during the course of dinner were memorable. To my friends and me, having that connection with one another during those times was meaningful and I did not want to forget those instances. Over time, I started another routine taking selfies after my weekend dinners with my friends. Taking such photos was an excuse for me to capture these precious moments of friendship and bonding.

Over 25 years ago, Dr. Gary Chapman penned the famous New York Times bestseller "The Five Love Languages." It was a groundbreaking idea about how humans express love and want to feel connected in five different ways. Personally, I think cooking for others can be considered the next love language because the intent of such an act is not so different from Dr. Chapman's.
