Our Story

Sunrise Primary School was founded 50 years ago by Mrs Elisabeth Wong. The wife of a wealthy businessman, she often helped out at a local charity. There, she noticed that many students were poor and could not afford to pay the school fees. Filled with compassion, she decided to set up a school which ~~these children could attend for free~~. She raised funds and gathered donations to set up the school, which has evolved to what we are today. Without her efforts, the school would not have existed nor produced talents such as Walter Lim, the celebrated pianist, and Choo Ah Lin, the renowned scientist.

Principal's Message

Many people have played a part in order for the school to reach this important milestone. While we celebrate our school's 50th anniversary, we should always remember the school motto, "To lead and to serve". I recall years ago, when the roof in some of the classrooms leaked, the students did not let that stop them from their learning. In the spirit of our founders, let us do our part for the less privileged. Half of all funds raised in the carnival will go to our chosen charity of the year, Hope Charity. I hope all Sunrisers, past and present, will join in the celebrations and contribute to those in need.

Mr Albert Tan, Principal

For each question from 21 to 28, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4) and shade your answer on the Optical Answer Sheet.

Ming's mother continued to scan her son's report slip. Then she placed it on the table and stared at him angrily. Ming stood still and dared not utter a single word. He knew he was in hot soup. In a firm voice, she said, "Ming, this is unacceptable. You have done poorly for all the subjects. I am going to take away your handphone for a month." Upon hearing that, Ming's jaw dropped and his eyes widened in disbelief. No handphone for a month? He took deep breaths. However, this did not help to calm him down. 5

"Not fair! You are unreasonable, Mom!" Ming protested.
 "Don't you dare talk back to me like that!" his mother snapped.

"Mom! I don't like you and I never want to be like you when I grow up!" Ming shouted back defiantly. Before things got more heated up, Father intervened and advised Ming to return to his room. Still seething with anger, Ming stormed to his room, shouting, "I do not want to talk to you ever again!" That night, Ming had a fitful sleep. He woke up several times throughout the night, still thinking about the heated exchange between him and his mother. 10

For the next few days, there was unbearable tension in the air. Ming ignored her presence. During meal times, Ming kept silent, refusing to join in the conversation. Likewise, he became withdrawn in school, refusing to talk to anyone or take part in any activities. He could hardly concentrate during lessons and looked as though life had gone out of him. 15

One afternoon, Ming was waiting at the bus stop to catch a bus home. When the bus arrived, he put his hand inside his pocket to take out his wallet. Instead, his fingers felt only an empty pocket. "My wallet...my money..." he muttered to himself frantically as he dug deeper into his pocket. He immediately started to retrace his steps back to the school. When he reached the General Office, he asked the staff whether anyone had turned in a wallet. "No, I'm afraid not," the office staff replied. As he continued to search for his wallet in the school, a downpour added to his predicament. 20

Angry and frustrated, Ming walked to the school canteen and waited for the rain to stop. "My school bag! My wallet must be inside there," he thought. Confidently, he emptied his school bag. His wallet was not there either. Feeling disappointed, he started to put the books back. Suddenly, he saw a small zipped compartment inside the bag which he had not noticed before. As he started to unzip it, he saw something. He pulled it out and it turned out to be a crumpled white envelope. He looked at the envelope and opened it curiously. 25 30

Inside the envelope, there was a piece of paper with a ten-dollar note. He held to the ten-dollar note tightly and started to read the message on the paper. "For use in times of need... Love, Mom." Tears started to well up in Ming's eyes. Her thoughtfulness was beyond his expectation.

On his way home, he pondered over his mother's words that were written on the piece of paper. It dawned on him that the hurtful things that he had said and done the past few days must have caused her heartache. He realised she had only his best interests at heart. Then all his pent-up anger went out of him. 35

At dinner time, Ming tried to get his mother's attention. "Mom...Mom," he called.

"Yes...what is it that you want?" his mother asked. 40

"When I grow up," he looked at her, and said, "I want to be like you." Ming's mother had a puzzled look on her face. "It's a long story," Ming said as he pointed to his school bag on the floor.

With a wide grin, she said, "I would like to hear that long story."

Ming nodded and said lovingly, "Perhaps one day, Mom." 45

That day, Ming learnt the most important lesson in life. There is nothing like a mother's love for her child.
