As a teenager, Terry Fox lost a leg to cancer. While he was undergoing treatment in the hospital, he was disturbed to see the suffering of fellow cancer patients. Being an athlete, he decided to run across Canada to raise funds and awareness for cancer research. He exclaimed, "The suffering must stop!"

In his run, known as the "Marathon of Hope", Fox covered 45 to 48 kilometres per day, hopping on his actual leg and his prosthetic one. The run was extremely demanding for Fox but quitting was never an option. After completing the gruelling 143-day run, his cancer had spread to his lungs and he died a few months later.

In 1981, the Terry Fox Run was founded to honour his efforts and tenacity towards supporting cancer patients. In addition, the Terry Fox Hall of Fame was set up to recognise Canadians who have made outstanding contributions to the disabled. Though he had departed, Fox's aspiration for a cancer-free world remains alive.

Please note that the passage for Comprehension questions 71 to 80 in Booklet B is on the next page. You may now go on to Booklet B.

Refer to the passage below when you answer questions 71 to 80 in Booklet B.

"Can you believe it? A Michelin star for a hawker stall!" I exclaimed, barely containing my excitement. In July 2016, Dad's humble chicken rice stall at Chinatown Food Centre was the first hawker stall to receive a Michelin Star. Dad became the talk of the town. Lines started forming at his famous $2 chicken rice – the cheapest Michelin meal globally. It was like overnight, Dad transformed from a regular hawker to a celebrity. 5

Since earning a Michelin star for his soya sauce chicken, Dad's life changed for the better. Dad no longer had to wake up, at the crack of dawn, to toil at his cramped stall, preparing ingredients, cooking and cleaning the stall single-handedly. He no longer worried about paying his suppliers on time. Instead, he was moving to and fro the stall and two new restaurants, ensuring that the quality of the food remained top-notch. But amidst all the changes, some habits were hard to let go. Dad still took the public transport from our three-room flat in Chinatown, and without fail, he would change into his chef's uniform at the stall, like it was his superhero suit. 10

Growing up, my sister and I looked forward to meal times especially when Dad was cooking, for we eagerly polish off every plate, testament to just how delicious Dad's cooking truly is. He was the eldest of five children, and all of them helped out at their parents' farm in Malaysia. Dad volunteered to cook for the family, and his passion for cooking only grew from there. He dreamed of starting his own restaurant someday. Fuelled by his dream, it was no surprise he dove headfirst into the culinary world when he made the big move to Singapore at eighteen. 15 20

Fifteen years of grinding in Chinese kitchens, Dad mastered the perfect soya sauce chicken and adapted the recipe to his taste. With some savings, he finally took the plunge and opened his own stall in Chinatown. One day, a Channel 8 crew, while exploring the bustling Chinatown hawker centre, stumbled upon his little corner. The crew member was attracted to it because Dad had hung many chickens at his stall. Most stalls hung only two or three chickens. The man ate his chicken rice and liked it. He asked Dad if he would like to be on a television programme which turned out to be the Michelin testing by seven Judges. Five of them rated Dad one star and he was declared a success. We were all jubilant upon hearing the news! 25 30

I remember the day Hersing Culinary approached Dad for partnership, wanting to expand Dad's chicken rice business locally and overseas. Initially, Hersing Culinary proposed raising the price of Dad's chicken rice to $10 per plate, capitalizing on its Michelin fame. I was puzzled when he firmly responded, "No way." Eventually, the company relented. Dad continued selling chicken rice at $2 at the Chinatown hawker stall. He also charged affordable prices at the other two restaurants that opened with the partnership. It was then that I realised what a great man he was. 35

All three outlets came under the brand name 'Hawker Chan Chicken Rice'. True to its word, Hersing Culinary took 'Hawker Chan Chicken Rice' overseas. There were three outlets in Taipei, two in Bangkok and one in Melbourne. With that partnership, Dad's main involvement was in quality control which was never to be compromised since the day he started his own stall. Thus, he insisted on having the final say in the new dishes created by the other chefs in these restaurants. 40

Despite how his life had evolved, Dad never forgot his humble beginnings as a kitchen helper, and counted his blessings. "There are people who can cook better than me but are not recognized for their skills," he would say, his voice tinged with 45 humility. "I'm just lucky."

And lucky we were, to have Dad, the man who turned a simple chicken rice stall into a global sensation, all while staying true to his roots and beliefs.
